FE FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

Ideas for Christmas Furnishing In an old poem satirizing Blenheim

"Thanks, sir." cried I, "'Tis very fine, But where d'ye cat, and where d'ye dine?" Of many a house besides Blenheim of many a house besides Biennelin the same questions would be pat. Furnishings of various periods are swept into a room and "surmounted by something Japanese," without regard to one's needs, until each piece seems to eye its neighbor askance, and there is no rest anywhere.

What a pity, particularly at Christmas, that everybody has not learned that beauty is—comfort? Our store is ready to teach them! Innumerable examples show how to group colors and styles, how to fit up cozy corners, how to hang draperies so that the Christmas spirit of cheer and welcome will fill every room. Come, if only for ideas.

The Manamater Store.

Of Certain Exploded Theories

FUME was, before we put our strength into things other than merely dry-goods, that certain lines of merchandise were considered things apart and savoring of a sort of mercantile sacredness. Jewelry, for instance, and bicycles, and silverware, and some other things.

We have changed that. The theory is exploded. We have shown that the same expert knowledge, the same liberality in expenditure, the same experience and accuracy in business dealings, were as valuable to you in these so-called "exclusive" matters, as they had proved to be in matters of silks and dress-goods and

There are stores in which certain lines are justifiably regarded with a lift of the eyebrows. Not ours. There is nothing here that can be marked with an interrogation point.

Take everything that we offer seriously. We promise you to do nothing by halves. You know that in most cases we do things larger and better than they have been done. That is our best reason for existence. It isn't a

We offer you silverware seriously. We offer you diamonds and rubies, and jewels of all kinds, seriously, We sell candies very seriously. We are probably the largest retail candy sellers in America. And so it goes, Whatever is here is here in honest purpose and to good and effective and serious purpose.

The Jewelry Store is an excellent demonstration of the point of this; -not the only one here, either, Jackets and Capes seems to of Velour be a passionate admiration for the velour garment. Right! These we show are the handsomest and richest things that we have known in some years of garment experience.

Paris sends most, but not all of the best. New York has styles in the showing that put Paris herself to the test.

French and American, they are all here. This is the kind of choosing that we feel pride in presenting. Here are a few, as examples:

An Example in MATIONAL LIBRARY, in the strictest interpretation of the phrase, is "up to date." As an example, the full-page illustrations in one volume are: The Circus Maximus; Francis Marion Crawford; Edward Everett Hale; Edmond About; Gladstone; Gen. Lew Wallace; Napoleon I.; Alice Cary; Louisa M. Alcott; Richard Harding Davis; Mrs. Constance Cary Harrison; Priscilla; Toussaint L'Ouverture; Ceylon; William Black; Sir Walter Besant; The Flight Into Egypt; Justin McCarthy; John Bright; -more than one-half the authors represented are living.

Take the selections in the same volume—there are 55, each complete in itself. One-third taken at random are: "The Upper Berth," Crawford; "The Skeleton in the Closet," Edward Everett Hale; "The Outcasts of Poker Flats," Bret Harte; "Cheating the Gallows," I. Zangwill; "Vesta," Edgar Fawcett; "Ethics of the Heroic Age," Gladstone; "The Chariot Race at Antioch," Wallace; "The Song of the Camp," Bayard Taylor; "Jack Hazard and the Chatfords," Trowbridge; "Little Women's Experiment in Housekeeping," Louisa M. Alcott; "A Recruit at Christmas," Richard Harding Davis; "The Insanity of Cain," Mary Mapes Dodge; "The Fight with a Bear," Gilbert Parker; "Toussaint L'Ouverture." Wendell Phillips; "Balacchi Brothers," Rebecca H. Davis; "The Insurrection," Besant; "The Other Wise Man," Henry Van Dyke; "An Encounter with Indians," Mrs. Burton Harrison; "Huldah, the Prophetess," Kate D. Wiggan.

Multiply by three and you have one volume, then again by 20—the number of volumes—and you have an idea of the great International Library.
